Having tried out several different types of media, it is undoubtedly the Canson[®] Infinity Aquarelle Ragpaper that is best suited to my images.

It guarantees that the collectors who purchase my photographs will be able to enjoy them for years to come. The colour rendering is exceptional and the watercolour texture enhances the impression of a drawn image which adding a really unique touch to my photographs.

I am also very much in favour of the manufacturing process, which uses 100% cotton and no optical brightening agents, with a natural white colour for more natural looking images.

I use it exclusively for fine art prints and this paper really is of the highest quality.
